NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Congress Recesses, the Farm Aid and Reapportionment Measures Are Signed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

With the farm aid bill signed by President Hoover and $151,500,000 appropriated to begin putting his provisions into operation, and the census and reapportionment measure also made law by the President's signature, congress quit work for the summer in the middle of the week. The senate recessed until August 10 when it will reassemble to begin debate on the tariff bill which its finance committee is expected to have completed by that date. The recess of the lower house is to extend until September 23, and between that day and October 14 it is intended to hold only perfunctory sessions. A week on the supposition that the senate will not have passed the tariff measure before the latter date.

Senator Borah of Idaho made a strong fight to have the tariff revision confined to agricultural and directly related commodities and in the course of a heated debate asserted that his resolution to that effect was in accord with the President's views and the primary purpose of the special session. Most of the regular Republicans and some Democrats, however, stood firm for more general revision and succeeded in beating the resolution by the narrow margin of one, the vote being 28 to 23.

JUST before recessing congress gave its approval to President Hoover's recommendation that France be released of the necessity of paying the $100,000,000 due August 1 for the car loan which it purchased after the close of the war, on the condition that the French government should pay the loan by the French parliament. Under the terms of that loan it was continued to be extended to part of the French debt which is funded for a period of 25 years. The loan was not repaid until a few days ago when it was paid in full.

The French government also repaid a loan of $100,000,000 which it had borrowed from the United States in 1918. This loan was also paid in full.

help the treasury and the systematic war that is being carried on by international criminals against the laws of the United States. It is these activities that are the root of all our difficulties."

Mayors of Detroit, Wyandotte, River Rouge, Trenton and other towns and cities of Michigan close to the Canadian border responded with pledges of wholehearted co-operation with the federal authorities if a safe enforcement is adopted. That the run-runners up that way are encouraged by the attacks on the enforcers was shown when the crew of a well-known liquor smuggling boat opened fire on a customs patrol speed boat near Detroit, smashing its bow and windshield and damaging its machinery. Officials of the Province of Ontario announced that they would try to reduce the peril of border gun fights by disarming the occupants of all boats leaving lake and river ports.

WHEN Oscar De Priest, colored, was sent to congress by a colored Chicago district everyone knew trouble was likely to result. It has come, and is likely to stay for some time. In the house Mr. De Priest had conducted himself in a manner that cannot be criticized, but the presence of himself and his family in Washington has brought on social complications. Mrs. Hoover recently entertained several congressional women in the White House, and among her guests was Mrs. De Priest. Of course the South rose in immediate and loud protest, and the action of the First Lady has been attacked as unseemly and unbecoming by southern legislators, officials and individuals. The implications of the affair are more than social, for the administration is receiving numerous warnings of a renewed solid Democratic South, these coming especially from those states below the Mason and Dixon line which were carried by Hoover.

VIRGINIA'S anti-Tammany Democrats, who, being bone dry, were opposed to Al Smith, consolidated themselves in a state convention in Danville which was dominated by Nelson James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church south. The 300 delegates nominated Prof. William M. Hooper of Washington and Lee university for governor and C. C. Berkeley for attorney general. The executive committee was authorized to select a slate of electors for the November election. The De Priest had been elected to the senate, and the Berkeley had been elected to the house.

naval reduction which should be couched in those simple terms understandable to the ordinary man in the street and which, while the pet aversion of the casuist, are the highest expression of true statesmanship. That final agreement covering quantitative dispositions would go to the nations for approval or rejection."

Mr. MacDonald told of his conversation with General Dawes and expressed his sincere belief that they might be instrumental "in preparing a board around which other nations might ultimately sit in co-operative fellowship studying the arts and the ways of peace."

PREMIER PAINCARÉ of France held a long conference in Paris with Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, who was on his way home from Madrid, and though there was no public announcement, it was understood they reached a complete agreement concerning the coming conference that will put the Young reparations plan in operation. Then M. Paincaré went before the foreign affairs and finance commissions of the house of deputies and urged that the way be cleared by the ratification of the American and British debt agreements. He told the two commissions that the great liquidation conference would be called soon so as to enable the chamber of deputies and the Reichstag to ratify the Young plan in good time for it to go into effect on September 1 and for the former body to put its O. K. on the debt agreements.

LOTTI, Assolant and Lefevre, the French aviators who flew across the Atlantic from Old Orchard, Maine, are being accorded all due honors in their home land, for they made a great flight notwithstanding the fact that they landed first on the coast of Spain instead of Le Bourget. This was made necessary by the unexpected presence in their plane of one Schreiber, a brush American youth who stowed away on the Yellow Bird and whose added weight made the take off difficult and prematurely exhausted the supply of fuel. Displaying scarcely the intelligence of a seven-year-old child, Schreiber did not realize that he was endangering the lives of the aviators and imperiling the success of their flight. The three Frenchmen treated him with the greatest forbearance and admitted he had nerve. But it is good to read that he was almost completely ignored in Paris and all right minded people hope that that will be his fate on his return to the United States. M. Lotti made the youth sign an agreement that half of any money he might receive as a result of his foolhardy exploit should be given to Assolant and Lefevre, the pilots, and to a fund for victims of air accidents.

Seven persons lost their lives when the City of Ottawa, huge air liner of the Imperial Airways on her way from England to Paris, with eleven passengers fell in the English channel three miles from the English shore. The main shaft of one of the two motors broke and the pilot was unable to keep the plane up or to land safely. Four passengers and the pilot and mechanic were rescued.

COLONEL and Mrs. Lindbergh emerged from their honeymoon seclusion aboard a power boat on Wednesday, appearing at Mitchell field, New York, to take part in the first tests in the prize competition held by the Guggenheim fund in the hope of discovering an absolutely safe airplane. Lindy put on a helmet and parachute and took up the first entry, after which he gave Mrs. Lindbergh a ride in a fast army plane.

ALL the troubles of Gen. Bramwell Booth, former commander in chief of the Salvation Army, came to an end when he died at his home in London. He was given a great funeral by the army whose council had deposed him recently, and its flags were kept flying high for as its officials said: "General Booth is not dead—he has passed to glory." Others: "On his death were Asa P.

A Good Advertisement

is an advertisement that has been carefully prepared and gives information about the goods offered for sale in an interesting and instructive way.

It isn't necessary to quote a cut price, to write an advertisement. In fact the majority of the good advertisements do not feature a cut price. They do show, however, that the article being offered for sale is worth the money asked for it and that it will be to the reader's distinct advantage to own it.

A well written advertisement influences readers until they want to buy. They want to buy the goods offered and they want to buy them from the merchant who advertises them.

A well written advertisement is a good salesman for the merchant who uses it.

The Flowers Made From Waste

By LEETE STONE

(Copyright.)

THERE were five children in the family younger than Amarita. Tonio and Luigi sold newspapers; Nikola, eighteen, was shipping clerk for an importer, and, counting his overtime, earned a fair wage. That left Angelina and the bambino. That Angelina's back had been crooked since her fall from the fire escape. She couldn't play with the other children.

Amarita was skilled in the art of taking bits of pink cambric, green muslin, and delicate vires, and from them fashioning a beautiful rose. Her earnings were good, like Nikola's; but when there are six mouths to count on a mother's, it calls for calculation to keep the cupboard well stocked with macaroni, and milk for the bambino; not to mention rent and clothes. But then, Amarita was a clever calculator.

When hot weather came, Amarita of the flower factory knew that pale Angelina needed the breath of real green country. But there seemed no way to manage it. The doctor's bills for the days Angelina's back hurt were usually high.

As a sorry substitute for fields of clover Amarita decided to bring her small crippled sister some factory flowers to look at.

Her problem lay in collecting enough waste bits of material from the factory floor, and from the big baskets where spoiled pieces and cuttings were thrown, to make Angelina's flowers. So Amarita went earlier every morning to the factory and stayed later because she couldn't take time during pay hours to work on her surprise for Angelina.

Amarita had to be very careful that Cesare, the handsome young foreman with the flashing, merry eyes, did not see her salvaging her scraps. He might not understand. She boy was hers whenever Cesare looked at her because his eyes seemed to say beautiful things.

Snatched moments here and there finally bore fruit in a marvelous little wreath of uncatagorized flowers that grew fantastically under Amarita's artful touch.

Suddenly Amarita took pains to hide the wreath from Giulia Caido's eyes. Giulia worked at her table, and quarreled with her brother Nikola and was all bitterness and Sicilian hate. And Giulia had seen Cesare look at Amarita with his soul in his eyes.

At last the wreath was finished and needed only an inch of wire to fasten its ends securely. Amarita was so intent on accomplishing this last touch that she didn't see Cesare, the foreman, stride quickly to her table in answer to the beckoning hand of Giulia, she of the wicked tongue.

Giulia's dark head bent close to Cesare with a whisper. "She steals materials," she nodded toward Amarita, who had just tied the wire which welded the wreath, and slipped the token in the pocket of her apron. "Ask her to show you what is in her pocket," the jealous girl added.

Cesare's face grew dark. Stock silencing was a serious offense. "What have you in your pocket?" he said, stepping behind Amarita's chair.

"It—it's nothing," she gasped, "only something I—that is—I've made it all outside regular hours, made it of waste cuttings and spoiled goods. A little wreath—not really flowers—just a toy for my little sister. She's sick. She's never seen real flowers growing. Truly—I made it all in spare . . . " Amarita winked back the tears. Giulia must not see her cry.

"Let me see it!" Cesare's voice was soft now, and in his eyes dwelt understanding.

He looked long at the little wreath of riotous colors. Some girls in the shop uttered still Cesare regarded the wreath quizzically as it lay in his palm.

"You did this all yourself? Out of waste material?" "Every bit of it. I know it's foolish—not like flowers that grow; but Angelina won't know the difference." "Go on working," said Cesare, "and I will return with this later."

Cesare stepped out of the shop and into the private office of the owner of the factory. He laid the strange looking wreath on the top of the mahogany desk, under the eyes of the stern chief who sat there.

"What do you think of that, Mr.?" "Hm-m! Modernistic! Queer but attractive! Then, more enthusiastically, "by Jove, it'll sell! I believe it's a hit for this season's hats. Where did you get it? Who designed it?"

Cesare smiled. He told the tale of Amarita—of a surreptitious task of love done with bits of waste.

"Waste?" cried the chief. "Where's that girl? Raise her wage at once and have her teach the others how to make these. We've got the novelty of the season! Get busy!"

That night as Amarita turned the factory corner on her way home Cesare, who had been waiting, stepped forth with all the savoir-faire of a Latin cavalier and took her arm. Talking, he spoke to Amarita of the dreams that lived in his eyes when he looked at her.

Soon there was a wedding. Angelina went to the country and looked at real flowers that grew and played in sunny fields of clover.

THE TOWN DOCTOR

(The Doctor of Towns)

WHAT GOOD IS A FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

A man recently asked me, "What good is a Fourth of July celebration to a town?" And he expressed a question that undoubtedly is in the minds of many, especially those past the age of getting a kick out of any kind of celebration.

It is true that much of the original intent and purpose of Fourth of July celebrations has been lost or at least overlooked in modern ways of celebrating. Have you ever stopped to consider how many of those that about fireworks, never stop to consider why they are doing it? I have often wondered at the percentage of people who make merry on the Fourth of July that really care in commemoration of the deed representative of the day. Leaving aside the honor due the day, a Fourth of July celebration has a material value to every community, whether that community holds a festival or the inhabitants go elsewhere to spend the day.

If your town is going to put on a celebration, push in and do everything you can to the organization committee wherever it is working it, and offer to do something.

Get busy and invite your friends to join you and make for the day. Make it an invitation worth while. If you haven't any friends you can induce to join in the festivities, help somebody else to entertain their guests or appoint yourself a committee of one to do your utmost to help entertain the special strangers in your midst.

Make up on brightening the corner where you live. Make your yard, your house, your store, your entire town look clean, bright and attractive. Put in your best clothes and your most winning smile, and when the company comes, show them around, introduce them to the place where you live, and "sell 'em" on your community.

If the Fourth of July isn't worth anything else to a community, at least it is worth the opportunity it gives you to tell everybody that comes to your town in what a good place it is and that the people are the real people.

If there is a celebration to be held in your town, and if you are not a member of the committee, you can have an opportunity to make a place of honor for the business and pleasure of the town. If you are not a member of the committee, you can have a place of honor for the business and pleasure of the town. If you are not a member of the committee, you can have a place of honor for the business and pleasure of the town.

But what if you do not celebrate at all? Then it is up to you to make a place of honor for the business and pleasure of the town. If you are not a member of the committee, you can have a place of honor for the business and pleasure of the town. If you are not a member of the committee, you can have a place of honor for the business and pleasure of the town.

BELINDA TAKES A VACATION

(By D. J. Walsh.)

BELINDA PEARSON was going to the city, and Fox Center, where she was as much of a public institution as the band stand or the town hall, must do without her for awhile.

However closely Fox Center might ape large town ways, it depended upon her to nurse its illnesses and bind up its wounds. To old Doctor Manker and the rest of the town she was just "Lindy"—their stay in disaster and trouble—with a deft hand for a bandage, or cooling of hot pillow and not above lending a hand in house-cleaning and preserving time.

"It's time for you to visit your cousin Mary," said Mrs. Next-Door Brown, by who was going to keep the key, care for Timmy, the cat, feed the chickens and gather the eggs. "You have earned a vacation, but I don't know what we'll do without you. I hope there won't be an accident, that no youngster chaps his foot with a hatchet or gets a fish-hook in his hand. Doctor Manker would have a conniption fit without you."

"Well, I'm going where I won't see or think of a sick person for two weeks," declared Lindy. "I'm tired of it, and of the smell of medicine. Don't tell anyone, Mrs. Bromby, but Cousin Mary wants me to spend the winter with her. She says I need a few months of quiet, and I will get it there. If I decide to stay I'll come back to close the house and provide for Timmy and the chickens, so don't say anything till then."

Mrs. Bromby shook her head dolefully as she watched the wholesome and capable "Lindy" go.

"Lindy" had a talent for nursing, and she began to exercise it at twelve years when her mother became an invalid. Then her younger brother, crippled by infantile paralysis, grew worse, and she had to care for him, with only the aid her busy father could give. They both died one summer, and then her father, broken by work and worry, was laid down five years, almost every waking hour of which she spent at his side.

After her hands were empty, there was only the home left, she must do something, and so she kept on taking care of the sick. It was easy for her, and she earned her living—as well as the love of every soul in town. But now she had revolted against the labor of twenty-five years—the pain of nursing, the comforting of irritable convalescents, the furnishing of an amplitude of shoulder for the mourner. She was breaking away and all that day as the train sped toward the big, new city, she was visualizing the future.

"I just want to rest and rest and forget all about sickness," she told herself. "I want to go to bed knowing that I can stay there all night and as late as I care to in the morning. Maybe, after a while I will find something to do—work, where there are beautiful colored things, and the sun shines and one can laugh and talk a bit."

The train was late and it was dark when they came to the station. As she caught a glimpse of Cousin Mary at the gate she noted that she looked tired—she must have been waiting a long time. Her thoughts leaped forward to the coming dawn, and her escape from drudgery.

Rack in Fox Center Timmy refused to eat or stay in Mrs. Brown's sunny kitchen, but huddled miserably on his deserted doorstep. Three black-fled of some secret ailment and the producing stopped, while Linda Bromby lay faced over her charges and longed for their owner to return. Doctor Manker was curd to a thread—ten cases of measles, two of typhoid—Lindy Robinson's broken leg, Martin's bone dislocated ankle, Mrs. Wilkins' long fever—while the two weeks stretched to three.

Then one day Mrs. Bromby heard a step at the door and "Lindy" was there, pale and tired—a different "Lindy" from the one who had swung so briskly away three-fourths of a month before. She had left her suitcase at her own door and, with the already rejuvenated Timmy as the guard of honor, crossed the yard.

"Howdy, Linda. I'll take my key please," Her voice was dull.

"Land sakes, Linda Pearson! You look like you'd been crawled through a knothole. Sit down a minute and in another minute I'll have you a cup of tea. What has happened to you?"

"Lindy" relaxing in the patterned cushion on the porch chair, with Timmy purring on her knee, and her tongue loosened by the fragrant tea unbanded herself.

"Well, Cousin Mary met me at the station, carried to death because the doctor told her husband under obligation for appointments. It was awful after Mrs. Whitney had lost spirit when we called him through, but it was hard to take care of Cousin How and for he wouldn't hear of a trained nurse after I got there, and with Mary so worried that she wasn't worth anything anywhere, and the doctor afraid I wouldn't take care of him right. Not in a few days he was on the mend. Then Cousin Mary, who is such a sweet child, came down with measles and I had her on my hands. Then the woman in the hat above—awful how they live in layers in the city—had what they said was pertussis. I don't know, but I have had too many cases like that to be scared of what that woman had. In a few days she was better and then Cousin Mary suffered one of her nervous headaches for a day and a night, so it was two weeks before I had an all-night's sleep, to say nothing of a chance to relax."

"Well, what then?" asked Mrs. Brown, by as "Lindy" stopped.

"Well, just this," began "Lindy." "The woman on the first floor had a nervous breakdown and employed Cousin Howard's doctor. He asked me to come and take care of her—and I had 'police' and 'intelligence' and 'm'—it would have been months, probably—me shut up with a patient to sick to think to do anything except to think up ways of keeping me busy. I stood it three days and then I told them I'd have to come home."

"But now what?" asked her friend.

"You were so tired of nursing and have come back to another stretch of it."

"Humph!" ejaculated Belinda. "I won't be working for me to get hold of a sick person with front and back yard, with sky over my head and hot eat soil under my feet, instead of lying in a coop the way they do in the city. Well, your tea was fine, and I feel better to have this off my chest. I'll open up the house and start to living again. I saw Doctor Manker on the way home and he seems dread glad to have me back. And Abner Johnson told me at the station that Minnie has lamboleg again and I am going over to make her comfortable for the night. Thanks for looking after things for me—I probably won't bother you again."

She had reached her own door somewhat impeded in her progress by Timmy weaving blissfully around her feet, when she turned and called:

"I guess we'd any of us have a hard time running away from life and I shouldn't try again."

Mrs. Bromby picked up her eugene with a sigh of relief, Fox Center had "Lindy" Pearson back.

How Great Scientist

Proved His Gratitude

When Charles P. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, came to this country from Germany, he sought at once to find work. He carried a letter of introduction to the Edison factory, but there he was told that "there are too many engineers coming to America now." Later he went to Yonkers to see Rudolf Eickemeyer, manufacturer of hat machinery and electrical devices. A two-hour conference ensued and Steinmetz was told to come back in a week.

This Steinmetz did. And this time he found a job awaiting him, relates Jonathan Norton Leonard in the World's Work Magazine. He was to be a draughtsman at $12 a week—not a bad starting salary for those days, and "certainly enough" to live on.

Steinmetz left the office, almost skipping with joy. He was to begin work the next day. He was actually a self-supporting American—and only two weeks after landing!

Then he had a sudden inspiration. Instead of going directly to the railroad station, he hunted up the courthouse and took out his first naturalization papers. This was the least he could do for the country that had treated him so well.

Substitute for Tin

The tin can, the first line of defense of the young bride who is forced to make good as a cook, the sure refuge of the husband when the wife is away, the vital necessity of the camper and the army and navy and one of the old standbys of the joke-monger, is causing some concern to engineers.

Nearly 800,000,000 tin cans are used annually in the United States and, having been used, pass on to the refuse pile. Eight billion cans a year require an enormous quantity of tin and it is not becoming any more plentiful with the passing of the years.

It is to meet this situation that experts are studying the problem and seeking ways and means of obtaining a substitute for the tin can. Whatever it may be, it must be cheap, and so the engineers are looking ahead to see what may be done.

Edible Locust Beans

The carob is a tree of the family Leguminosae, a native of the countries around the Mediterranean sea in size and manner of growth the carob resembles the apple tree. The seeds are bitter and of no use, but the sweet pulp renders the pods an important article of food to the poorer classes of the countries in which it grows, and contains as high as 50 per cent of sugar. They are also valuable as food for horses and cattle, for which they are extensively used in the south of Europe. It is the last few years they have been imported into Great Britain and the name of "sugar beans" or "St. John's bread."

One Hat for This Lady

When the Chinese woman in the street wears a hat which becomes her shadow rather than her face and that is what she wears the remainder of her life. The hat is likely to last a lifetime and should it wear out, it is replaced by another exactly like the first. The value of the headpiece depends upon the wealth of the wearer. Some are studded with precious stones and gold, others are for mere simple and less expensive. But, whatever the style and whatever the cost it is the only style of hat that every Chinese woman wears in Manchuria.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE: ITS LETTER AND SPIRIT

covery and its effects as would certainly lead, suffering humanity to freedom from ignorance and sin, and release from sickness.

On this beneficent truth the organization of The Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, was founded and organized.

MANIFESTATIONS OF THE LETTER

It may be helpful or of interest to those not familiar with the Christian Science movement to make a brief statement as to the main manifestations of the letter in this religious body; in other words, to mention the salient points in the Christian Science organization. There is The Mother Church with its branches throughout the world and its eleemosynary institutions—The Christian Science Benevolent Association in Boston and the Pleasant View Home at Concord, New Hampshire. Second, is The Christian Science Board of Directors of the Mother Church, appointed originally by Mrs. Eddy, and through her directions is a self-perpetuating body. This Board has a general initiatory and supervising functions, in enlarging and protecting the work of the movement. Third, is The Christian Science Publishing Society, which prints, publishes, and distributes all authorized Christian Science literature. Fourth, are the Committees on Publication, whose duties are to correct wrong statements about Christian Science appearing in the public press. Fifth, there follow The Christian Science Board of Lectureship and the public Reading Rooms. These channels of activity, simple in organization and administration, are the chief marks of the letter, that is, of the visible church, as known to Christian Scientists. Grateful as one is for the temporary letter of Christian Science which serves as vehicles for truth and waymarks of progress, yet more grateful is he for the eternal spirit of Christian Science which is the pulsating, healing power of the Christ.

SEEKERS AFTER GOOD

Multitudes of men and women throughout the world have heard and read of the regeneration and healing of the sick and sinful through Christian Science. They know that some of their friends and acquaintances, and even members of their families, have taken a new lease of life, and are manifesting health and happiness, activity and success, through Christian Science. These results are leading an ever-increasing number of persons to ponder over the subject and to wonder whether they may not find relief from their burdens through the same means. Deep down in their hearts, all men desire peace, harmony, wholeness. In the language of the Scriptures, "the whole creation groaneth". Very often do people say mentally, in their own language, "O send out thy light and thy truth; let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles." Gladly would I say something to encourage each person in their turning to Christian Science. I would encourage them to look the evidence for Christian Science healing squarely in the face, and to judge it by its fruits. One is compelled to regret the restraint of those who refuse to rush precipitately into any course of action. The Bible commands us to be ready to give a reason for our faith. Christian Science asks no recognition save on the basis of demonstration. There is nothing mysterious, mystical or elusive about its tenets. The sum total of its teaching is love, and in Science, the word "love" means the reflection of the divine Mind in individual man. Therefore is there no ground for anyone to be afraid or ashamed to approach and to appeal to Christian Science for help to overcome sickness, sin, lack, sorrow and even death. Even though one may have no faith that Christian Science can relieve him of his burdens, nevertheless the fact that he knows it has relieved others and that he himself needs help, is sufficient ground for his action in approaching Christian Science.

SPIRITUAL COOPERATION

When by means of Christian Science treatment the individual is conscious of coming freedom, he must himself begin and continue mental activity; he must be a worker with God. Christian Science healing puts one in the ranks of the first-born; a great blessing has brought with it a great responsibility. Freely he has received, and no great progress toward final peace is possible unless one's gratitude manifests itself in sincere endeavor to live the truth he has seen. Christian Science does not relieve one from the stern necessity of observing the Ten Commandments, and conforming one's life to the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount. The Christian Scientist must grow in grace, and this growth comes through the channels of mental activity supplied by the Bible, the Christian Science textbook, Mrs. Eddy's other writings, and the opportunities for work in the Mother Church and in branch churches.

BETHEL NOSES OUT FRYEBURG 4 to 3

The local aggregation journeyed to Lovell Sunday afternoon and took Fryeburg into camp in a hard-fought battle. The game was featured by rather questionable umpiring and sterling defense work by both teams.

Bethel started off with a bang in the first when Eldredge, lead-off man, connected for a double, scoring on errors by the pitcher and catcher. This was the only score until the third. In this inning Bethel scored three runs on a base on balls, a hit, and two errors.

Fryeburg had a run handed to them on a platter in their half of the same inning when Swan let one go through him. Allen passed the next man and Bartlett got his signals crossed. He heaved the ball to second and there was no one to cover the bag as the man was forced.

Our opponents scored another in the fifth on two hits. Their last run came in the sixth when Eldredge let a ball slip through. This concluded the scoring for both teams although Bethel had men on bases in the sixth and seventh.

Wheeler at shortstop for the locals played heads up baseball, making three very pretty catches. Robertson in center field also covered plenty of ground while his opponent in the same position made one of the best shoestring catches ever seen by this young scribe.

Eldredge and Swan contributed two baggers to assist in the scoring and Dale Allen stretched a single into a run when the Fryeburg boys started throwing the ball around.

Need a Good Memory
The ability of the officeholder or of secretary to remember faces and names is a valuable asset. Though the elevator boy occupies a humble station, a good memory is just as essential in his work. He must remember the name of the person who called this or that apartment, and the message. Packages without addresses are left in his care, and he must make no mistake in delivering them. The baby in his perambulator outside is crying. The apartment is filled with babies; he could make no greater blunder than to call the wrong mother. Members of a family go out, telling him to tell other members when they will be in and what to do while waiting. He is rewarded, but often not in proportion to the tasks put upon his memory.—Boston Herald.

Kindly Shoppers Had Consolated Mary Ellen

On a shopping expedition in the Christmas holidays, little Mary Ellen had a dollar with which to buy a present for dad. On the way downtown with her mother they met her aunt and little cousin. Arriving in a large department store, the children received permission to go to the toy department while some shopping in another part of the store was done by the elder folk.

After about an hour the mother and aunt saw a crowd collected at the basement stairs and found Mary Ellen in the center of the group in tears, with several of the women weeping copiously, she having thought she had lost her dollar.

Everything was lovely when mother explained she had her pocketbook and the present was then bought for dad. The next day while on another shopping trip with her mother, Mary Ellen had 60 cents that her mother did not know she had.

"Where did you get that money, Mary Ellen?" asked her mother.

"I know yesterday, when I thought I had lost my dollar, those women made me take it."—Indianapolis News.

Forbidden Fun
A Chinese boy of fourteen, according to the North China Herald, was involved in an automobile accident, witnessed the death of a pedestrian during a police battle with kidnappers, and was himself kidnapped and held for two hours. He was on his way to school when all this happened and, arriving finally, he apologized to the teacher for being tardy.

Like any normal boy, he realized that under no circumstances should mere adventures and pleasure interfere with his education.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
L. A. Edwards, Pastor
10:45 Morning Worship. Subject of sermon by the Pastor will be "The Courage of Our Conventions."

Some people have opinions that cannot be moved, so has a bumpy mule. Stubbornness and conviction are not synonymous terms.

Have we the courage of our convictions in matters of religion?

If we believe something with all our heart, and our neighbor holds a different view, should we try to win him to our way of thinking?

Is there a danger in these days of loose thinking that the great fundamentals of the faith shall be lost?

Think of what we owe to the men and women who had the courage of their convictions. Arguments may fail. People may refuse to acknowledge evidences that you may produce; but the life of courageous faith, has never failed to convince.

For the summer period we are holding but one service a week. May we not ask our people to set apart this hour for worship.

Oxford County United Parish

Embracing Albany, North Lovell, Stoneham and the Waterford. Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. I. Bull, B. F. Wentworth, A. C. Townsend.

Last Sunday all the morning services in the Parish were merged in one at the Parish service at Albany. The Lawrence Church, Portland, had charge.

"The Church," a men's class in St. of the church. Some twenty-five men came from Portland with their teachers, Mr. Henry Merrill, and with an orchestra.

Music and a choir were brought out from the church and George Hall to the large gathering from the communities of the United Parish were seated to listen to collections by the orchestra and to sing familiar hymns with the leading of the orchestra.

Mr. Merrill delivered a very interesting address on the subject of "Thank offerings," making it an interpretation of the 1929 Psalm.

The day was ideal for such a gathering, the sky being overcast but without rain. After the service, many who had brought their lunches picked up groups to whom the Albany ladies served coffee. Some of the groups became family reunions, notably the Cummings family who ate together under the maple trees set out by their ancestor.

Next Sunday the Parish will be visited by Rev. Lyndal Hughes, District Superintendent of the Portland District of the Methodist Church. He will visit the South Waterford service in the morning, where the Sunday School will hold its annual children's day. Mr. Hughes will speak briefly to the children. He will then attend the service at North Waterford at 11 A. M., where he will preach.

The Sunday School of the Parish will take a recess during July and August during which time the Church Vacation Schools will be held at two points in the Parish. The first school will open at East Waterford, Tuesday, July 2.

Miss Maude, pastor of Ashland, Maine, will have charge of the Vacation school. The second school will begin later at Waterford or South Waterford. Miss Lada Howe of Bethel, Maine, will be in charge of the school.

Transportation will be provided where needed. It is hoped that all the children of the Parish will attend one or the other of these schools.

The coming picture for the week of July 4 is "The Story of the War" with Ben Hur. The Thursday evening service will be given to the new Vacation United Parish, which will make necessary the cessation of the churching to the home parish. This will be done as a religiously satisfactory to the sister parish.

Rev. Hall and Wentworth are attending the Conference of North Church Women at South Park this week.

In a St. Louis park a lot of water was paid enough to expose a person's warts.

Courteous Spaniard

The palace of the Escorial, where the mortal remains of Spanish royal personages are laid to rest, is one of the gloomiest collections of buildings imaginable. Yet, says a writer in the London Daily Chronicle, I have a very pleasant recollection of it. I was walking from Segovia to Madrid, and wanted to see the Escorial on the way. I inquired from a countryman how to reach the palace. He at once offered to guide me, and did so for several miles. Then he utterly refused, with graceful Spanish courtesy, to take any reward. The heavy halls and chapels could not depress me after that display of kindly fellowship.

Expected Too Much

They were looking over a house the agent warmly recommended. It was in rather poor condition, and one room appeared to be particularly dilapidated.

"But look, man!" cried the prospective tenant. "We couldn't live in a place like this! Why, there's actually moss growing on that damp wall."

The house agent flushed.

"My dear sir," he retorted indignantly, "at the rental I'm asking you surely don't expect orchids, do you?"

Fighting Fire in Home

In case a fire starts in a room, close all doors and windows to prevent a draft. Give the alarm promptly. A few pails of water thrown on at first may do more good than thousands of gallons later. A blaze may often be smothered with a rug or blanket. If the clothes catch fire, lay the patient flat on the floor at once, running about fans the flames, which tend to burn upward toward the face. Smooth the flames with a heavy coat, rug or blanket. If water is not at hand.

Watermarks in Paper

Watermarks in paper have been used for a long time to tend distinction in the product of a particular paper mill and for other purposes. One of the oldest, a circle surmounted by a tall cross is found in documents dating back to the fourteenth century. Other old marks are the fleur-de-lis, the coat of arms of the monarch, the hand pointing to a five pointed star and the hand, well known in papers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Fals

The late Chas. M. Depew was fond of telling stories on himself. On one of his last birthdays, which had become occasions of ceremony, he told this one:

"I feel as Methuselah must have when one of the beauties of his court congratulated him on his nine hundred sixtieth birthday saying, 'You don't look a day over 120.'"

This also on himself:

"One day I was stopped in the street by a lady who asked if I her aged father might come in and visit me. 'He is nearly as old as you,' she said. 'He is feeble-minded, but I know he would enjoy talking to you.'"

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE

Whereas, George E. Brooks, of Bethel, Oxford County, Maine, by his mortgage deed, dated the twenty-eighth day of May, A. D. 1927, and recorded in Oxford Registry, Book 382, Page 276, conveyed to me, the undersigned, a certain parcel of real estate situated in said Bethel, and bounded as follows:

A certain lot or parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in Bethel in said County of Oxford, on the east side of the road leading from Bryant's Pond to Rumford, beginning at the southeast corner of land now or formerly of Bert G. Whitman and Charles McInnis, thence easterly sixteen rods; thence northerly at right angles ten rods; thence westerly on a line parallel to the east line sixteen rods to the road; thence southerly along said road to the point of beginning, in area one acre.

Also one other parcel of real estate lying directly east of and adjoining the first above described parcel and bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the southeast corner of land of said Davis, above described thence easterly eight rods on line dividing their parcel from land of Charles B. McInnis; thence northerly at right angles ten rods; thence westerly parallel with the McInnis lot line eight rods; thence southerly on said Davis east line ten rods to the point begun at, in area, one acre; and whereas the condition of said mortgage has been broken, now therefore, by reason of the breach of the condition thereof I claim a foreclosure of said mortgage.
